

Rothko Modern Palette Knife Painting

1. Take your last paper and use it to create this Rothko style Modern artwork. Get your paint ready and smoothly smear some red paint onto your paper in geometric shapes.

2. Once you have some basic geometric shapes, begin mixing other colors of your choice to make other marks & designs on your paper. To make orange, mix yellow and a little red.

3. Continue adding patterns and color until you think you have a nice and balanced design.

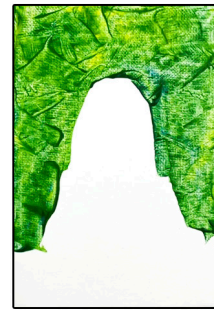

4. When you think you are finished, take a step back from your painting & assess if there are any additional spots that need a pattern, color, or shape.

This project is designed to be a little faster so that you can make another project with the extra paper if you want!

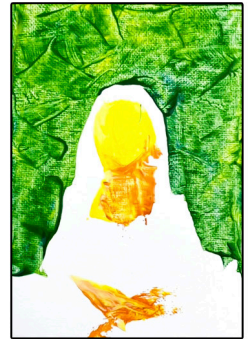

Mona Lisa Palette Knife Painting

1. Put a drop of yellow and blue paint on your palette paper. These drops of paint should be about the size of a quarter. Mix these two colors together with your palette knife. What color is it? Use this green paint to outline the shape of the Mona Lisa's head and shoulders. Leave a little bit of space on the bottom of the canvas too.

2. Add another quarter-size drop of yellow paint to your paper palette. Add a drop of red nearby. Make her face yellow and her neck and hands a mixture of red and yellow (that will look orange).

3. Mix a drop of red + black to make dark red. Use that to make Mona Lisa's arms, body, and shoulders.

4. "Paint" the hair red. Scratch lines into the paint.

5. Add some black behind and on the legs of the Mona Lisa.

6. Now it's time to add details! Make a blue blanket on the Mona Lisa's lap (over top of the black you added in Step 5).

7. Add details on her face using the tip of your palette knife.
